KAM curatorial internships are offered during the fall and spring semesters, as well as during the summer. They are compensated with academic credit hours, and are not salaried positions. Applicants do not need a background in art history to apply.

Internships require a commitment of at least 6 hours a week, and a letter of support from the student’s advisor. Applicants should have excellent communication and writing skills, computer proficiency, and research skills.

Availability is dependent upon curatorial needs. Interns are assigned to work with an individual curator, based on the student’s educational background, experience, and interests. The goal of KAM internships is to help individuals interested in museum careers or related fields gain significant experience in one or more areas of museum practice, including work with the collection, exhibitions, publications, and programs.

Students must have the support of a faculty member to apply. If selected, the student can enroll in an independent study in art history (ARTH 391) for 2 or 3 credit hours with a specific curator. The curator will assume responsibility for overseeing and evaluating the student’s work at the museum, and assign a letter grade at the end of the internship.
